Russian as a Second Language. Basic Course in two books. Textbooks for school children (in Russian). The book Basic Course 1 is meant for schoolchildren older than seven (up to fourteen) living in a non-Russian speaking environment and starting a systematic study of the Russian language. The book will take a year and a half or two academic years given that the pupils get two hours a week in class and spend one hour a week doing their homework. The main goals of Basic Course 1 is speaking, reading and writing Russian. The pupil will be able to master basic grammar which does not mean learning grammar rules. Grammar is learnt in patterns given in every unit. Every unit of the course is supplemented with a Russian-English vocabulary (Russian-German for German learners) which helps English speaking children work without assistance. There is also a guide to methods for a Russian speaking teacher. The book Basic Course 2 is for school children older than eight who have completed studying the book Basic Course 1. The main goal of Basic Course 2 is teaching the pupil to speak Russian fluently and correctly. The pupil's vocabulary will increase by nearly a thousand units as a result of memorizing new words as well as mastering various means of word-building. Famous prosaic and poetic pieces of fiction for children constitute the reading matter of the textbook, such as stories by D. Dragounsky, N. Nosov, Panteleyev, K. Paustovsky, L. Uspensky and other writers; which helps the pupil use the vocabulary typical of the middle school age. Reading and learning poems helps to work out correct intonation and get rid of an accent if there is any. The textbook prepares the pupil for reading fiction in Russian. The book is supposed to be done by the class in a year and a half or two years depending on the pupils' progress.
