La Ragazza Carla / A Girl Named Carla (Transference S) By Elio Pagliarani

La ragazza Carla is a long prose-poem written between 1954 and 1957 set in Milan just after the Second World War. The protagonist is seventeen-year-old Carla Ambrogio who works as a 'shorthand typist in the shadow of the Duomo'. Pagliarani describes how Carla confronts the hostile environment in which she lives and works with courage and intelligence. We can see the opening scene as a 'pan' of Milan with its traffic, people, railway bridges, and lorries. The city still bears the scars of war-time bombings and many buildings are still gutted. However, there are already signs of the forthcoming economic boom such as neon lights, cinemas and shopping centres. The young woman will gradually learn how to cope with life and will become part of the anonymous flow of the city like everyone else. Soon she will forget her fear of living and grow up accepting the norms and conventions of the society she lives...

Editorial Review

About the Author

Elio Pagliarani (Viserbia, Italy 1927) is one of the most prominent contemporary Italian poets. His experimentalism with language made him one of the protagonists of the Neoavanguardia and the Gruppo 63, along with Eco, Balestrini, Manganelli and others. His complete works have recently been published by the prestigious Garzanti. La ragazza Carla stands as the finest example of postwar experimental poetry.
