Piero di Cosimo, By R. Langton Douglas

The son of a goldsmith, Piero was born in Florence and apprenticed under the artist Cosimo Rosselli, from whom he derived his popular name and whom he assisted in the painting of the Sistine Chapel in 1481. In the first phase of his career, Piero was influenced by the Netherlandish naturalism of Hugo van der Goes, whose Portinari Triptych (now at the Uffizi Gallery in Florence) helped to lead the whole of Florentine painting into new channels. From him, most probably, Cosimo acquired the love of landscape and the intimate knowledge of the growth of flowers and of animal life. The manner of Hugo van der Goes is especially apparent in the Adoration of the Shepherds, at the Berlin Museum. He died of plague on 12 April 1522. From Wikipedia, to which I donate monthly.
